
BOOK OVERVIEW

II Thessalonians

Author: the Apostle Paul

Date: A.D. 52

Recipients: “the church of the Thessalonians” (II Thessalonians 1:1)

Summary: the day of the Lord

Key verses: II Thessalonians 1:7b–10

Notes:

This letter was probably written in response to the report that Paul received from the Thessalonians after they received his first letter.

Apparently, Paul’s first letter did not clear up the matter of Christ’s return; so he gives further instruction concerning the subject.

Paul encourages the Believers by assuring them that God will render justice upon those who are persecuting them.

Apparently Paul dictated some of his letters; but, as is noted in II Thessalonians 3:17, sometimes he concluded the letter with a note in his own handwriting.

Until the New Testament was completed, the teachings of Christianity were passed on by word of mouth, the “traditions” mentioned in II Thessalonians 2:15.

Paul uses his own example of working rather than being idle and living off of the work of others. (II Thessalonians 3:6-10, see also Acts 18:2-3)

BOOK OVERVIEW

II Thessalonians

Author: the Apostle Paul

Date: A.D. 52

Recipients: “the church of the Thessalonians” (II Thessalonians 1:1)

Summary: the day of the Lord

Key verses: II Thessalonians 1:7b–10

Notes:

This letter was probably written in response to the report that Paul received from the Thessalonians after they received his first letter.

Apparently, Paul’s first letter did not clear up the matter of Christ’s return; so he gives further instruction concerning the subject.

Paul encourages the Believers by assuring them that God will render justice upon those who are persecuting them.

Apparently Paul dictated some of his letters; but, as is noted in II Thessalonians 3:17, sometimes he concluded the letter with a note in his own handwriting.

Until the New Testament was completed, the teachings of Christianity were passed on by word of mouth, the “traditions” mentioned in II Thessalonians 2:15.

Paul uses his own example of working rather than being idle and living off of the work of others. (II Thessalonians 3:6-10, see also Acts 18:2-3)

BOOK OVERVIEW

II Thessalonians

Author: the Apostle Paul

Date: A.D. 52

Recipients: “the church of the Thessalonians” (II Thessalonians 1:1)

Summary: the day of the Lord

Key verses: II Thessalonians 1:7b–10

Notes:

This letter was probably written in response to the report that Paul received from the Thessalonians after they received his first letter.

Apparently, Paul’s first letter did not clear up the matter of Christ’s return; so he gives further instruction concerning the subject.

Paul encourages the Believers by assuring them that God will render justice upon those who are persecuting them.

Apparently Paul dictated some of his letters; but, as is noted in II Thessalonians 3:17, sometimes he concluded the letter with a note in his own handwriting.

Until the New Testament was completed, the teachings of Christianity were passed on by word of mouth, the “traditions” mentioned in II Thessalonians 2:15.

Paul uses his own example of working rather than being idle and living off of the work of others. (II Thessalonians 3:6-10, see also Acts 18:2-3)