

CHRISTIANITY.

Is it a thing of the past?

Or, our hope for the future

We live in an age where there is prosperity, comfortable homes and the means to continually improve our life styles. All in all, living in the UK, is not too bad at all. But when we look around at our society however, we see a different story.

There is an increase in drink related violence and binge drinking among young people, (under 16's now drink twice as much as 10 years ago.) There is an annual cost to the nation of almost £22 billion to sort out the problems that go with it. (Daily Express 15/3/04)

Mobile phones and the internet have been blamed for a big rise in adultery leading to fear, mistrust and breakdown of relationships (Daily Express 15/3/04)

Before 1976, we all lived much simpler lives. Our homes consisted of one television, 3 piece suite, dinning table and chairs. In contrast, today's home boasts luxury fixtures and fittings and as much high Tec equipment and entertainments as we can accommodate.

In a recent study however, reported on Radio Merseyside, 17/3/04, it appears that all this does not seem to make us any happier than our parents or grandparents. In fact, many are going to extreme lengths in their search for pleasure and happiness, sometimes taking great risks with there lives and health.

CHRISTIANITY.

Is it a thing of the past?

Or, our hope for the future

We live in an age where there is prosperity, comfortable homes and the means to continually improve our life styles. All in all, living in the UK, is not too bad at all. But when we look around at our society however, we see a different story.

There is an increase in drink related violence and binge drinking among young people, (under 16's now drink twice as much as 10 years ago.) There is an annual cost to the nation of almost £22 billion to sort out the problems that go with it. (Daily Express 15/3/04)

Mobile phones and the internet have been blamed for a big rise in adultery leading to fear, mistrust and breakdown of relationships (Daily Express 15/3/04)

Before 1976, we all lived much simpler lives. Our homes consisted of one television, 3 piece suite, dinning table and chairs. In contrast, today's home boasts luxury fixtures and fittings and as much high Tec equipment and entertainments as we can accommodate.

In a recent study however, reported on Radio Merseyside, 17/3/04, it appears that all this does not seem to make us any happier than our parents or grandparents. In fact, many are going to extreme lengths in their search for pleasure and happiness, sometimes taking great risks with there lives and health.

CHRISTIANITY.

Is it a thing of the past?

Or, our hope for the future

We live in an age where there is prosperity, comfortable homes and the means to continually improve our life styles. All in all, living in the UK, is not too bad at all. But when we look around at our society however, we see a different story.

There is an increase in drink related violence and binge drinking among young people, (under 16's now drink twice as much as 10 years ago.) There is an annual cost to the nation of almost £22 billion to sort out the problems that go with it. (Daily Express 15/3/04)

Mobile phones and the internet have been blamed for a big rise in adultery leading to fear, mistrust and breakdown of relationships (Daily Express 15/3/04)

Before 1976, we all lived much simpler lives. Our homes consisted of one television, 3 piece suite, dinning table and chairs. In contrast, today's home boasts luxury fixtures and fittings and as much high Tec equipment and entertainments as we can accommodate.

In a recent study however, reported on Radio Merseyside, 17/3/04, it appears that all this does not seem to make us any happier than our parents or grandparents. In fact, many are going to extreme lengths in their search for pleasure and happiness, sometimes taking great risks with there lives and health.

Is there any answer to our problems today in our modern world. I would like to say, yes there is! In a recent BBC survey, 'What do people think about God', it seems in the UK, our faith in God has reached an all time low. I believe there is a very strong link here with the problems in our society and I believe it is here that we find the answer.	Nearly two thousand years ago, shortly after the death of Christ, one hundred and twenty men and women were together in an upstairs room, waiting, as they had been told to do. They had faithfully followed Christ through His three years of ministry, heard his teachings, seen the miracles, witnessed His cruel death on a Roman cross and His resurrection . On the day of Pentecost, the Spirit of God came upon them, they had an experience that was not only to change their lives, but countless others too, both then and in years to come.	The powerful work of Gods Holy Spirit continues today in many peoples lives throughout the world. He has not given up on us! There is forgiveness and a new beginning (new birth) through Christ Jesus to all who will seek Him.
CUT--HERE
Is there any answer to our problems today in our modern world. I would like to say, yes there is! In a recent BBC survey, 'What do people think about God', it seems in the UK, our faith in God has reached an all time low. I believe there is a very strong link here with the problems in our society and I believe it is here that we find the answer.	Nearly two thousand years ago, shortly after the death of Christ, one hundred and twenty men and women were together in an upstairs room, waiting, as they had been told to do. They had faithfully followed Christ through His three years of ministry, heard his teachings, seen the miracles, witnessed His cruel death on a Roman cross and His resurrection . On the day of Pentecost, the Spirit of God came upon them, they had an experience that was not only to change their lives, but countless others too, both then and in years to come.	The powerful work of Gods Holy Spirit continues today in many peoples lives throughout the world. He has not given up on us! There is forgiveness and a new beginning (new birth) through Christ Jesus to all who will seek Him.
CUT--HERE
Is there any answer to our problems today in our modern world. I would like to say, yes there is! In a recent BBC survey, 'What do people think about God', it seems in the UK, our faith in God has reached an all time low. I believe there is a very strong link here with the problems in our society and I believe it is here that we find the answer.	Nearly two thousand years ago, shortly after the death of Christ, one hundred and twenty men and women were together in an upstairs room, waiting, as they had been told to do. They had faithfully followed Christ through His three years of ministry, heard his teachings, seen the miracles, witnessed His cruel death on a Roman cross and His resurrection . On the day of Pentecost, the Spirit of God came upon them, they had an experience that was not only to change their lives, but countless others too, both then and in years to come.	The powerful work of Gods Holy Spirit continues today in many peoples lives throughout the world. He has not given up on us! There is forgiveness and a new beginning (new birth) through Christ Jesus to all who will seek Him.